Kindling for Worship From Psalm 25

Jason Hardin

It's the season of bonfires and kindling–easily combustible material –is one of the fastest ways to get a fire started. Psalm 25, a psalm of David, is full of kindling for worship.

> To you, O LORD, I lift up my soul.
> O my God, in you I trust. (25:1-2)

That's why we're here today–to lift up our souls to our Creator, to express our trust in him and have it fortified by each other.

> Make me to know your ways, O LORD;
> teach me your paths.
> Lead me in your truth and teach me,
> for you are the God of my salvation;
> for you I wait all the day long. (25:4-5)

What a powerful collection of verbs worth integrating into our prayers today and throughout this week–"make me," "teach me," "lead me." The LORD is the shepherd who hears our prayers.

> Remember your mercy, O LORD, and your steadfast love,
> for they have been from of old.
> Remember not the sins of my youth or my transgressions;
> according to your steadfast love remember me,
> for the sake of your goodness, O LORD! (25:6-7)

We are the latest in a long line of people who do not deserve his mercy, and yet, "from of old" he has revealed himself as a God of steadfast love and grace. "Please do not remember my sins that you have forgiven, but please remember me." What an extraordinary thing to be able to pray…

"For the sake of his goodness." That's why we're here, and we're glad you're here to worship this God who is infinitely worthy.
